G. Exhumation of Remains:

In accordance with the Israeli health regulations, remains of persons of the Jewish faith may be disinterred a year after the burial. As for remains of persons of other faiths, there is no law prohibiting disinterment at any given time, provided that the Ministry of Health has no objection. The exhumation must be performed in the presence of a representative of the Israeli Ministry of Health.

The Ministry of Health, having given the necessary permission for exhumation of remains, must also obtain the consent of the Chief Rabbinate of Israel for exhumation of the remains of persons of the Jewish faith. For exhumation of the remains of persons of the Muslim faith, the consent of the Islamic High Council is needed, and for exhumation of persons of the Christian faith, church consent is required. The Burial Society is then called upon to exhume the remains. Depending on the stage of decomposition, remains to be shipped may require embalming. Exhumation-related charges are as follows:

- Ministry of Health - Certificate of Consent and presence of representative at exhumation: $250;
- Exhumation fee: $1500 - $2000.
- Approximate freight charges to the US: $2000;

The Burial Society fee can vary widely, according to the arrangements made between the Society and the family of the deceased. It also depends on the financial status of the family. Therefore, it is impossible to give a fixed amount.

H. Remarks:

Autopsies: Autopsies in Israel are performed in Israel in cases where the cause of death is unclear. Under other circumstances, where foul play is suspected and the Israeli police require an autopsy (once permission is granted by the next of kin), the family is not obliged to pay the cost of the autopsy. In cases where the family is required to pay the costs, it is approximately $850.00. In the West Bank, the Palestinian National Authority, Forensic Medical Center in Abu Dees can also perform autopsy (fees may depend on the circumstance of the individual case). Note: For security reasons autopsies performed by Palestinian Forensic Medical center may not be honored by the Israeli Government.
